

Prometric admits CAT lapses

NEW DELHI: US-based firm Prometric, which conducted the computer-based admission test for the country's top business schools CAT 2009, has admitted that the administration of the exam was far from perfect. "While the administration was far from perfect, tests were successfully given to more than 2.15 lakh candidates over the course of 11 days," said Prometric India MD Soumitra Roy adding that Prometric strongly believes in the test's credibility.
